HISTORY OF THE BURNED OVER DISTRICT

HISTORY

- The burned over district refers to the western part of New York in the early 19th century.
- This is where religious revivals and the formation of various religious groups (sects and cults) took place.

HISTORY

- Charles Finney was the person who coined the term “burnt district.”
- This identified the area where religious revivals burned until there was no more fuel (unconverted people) to burn (convert).

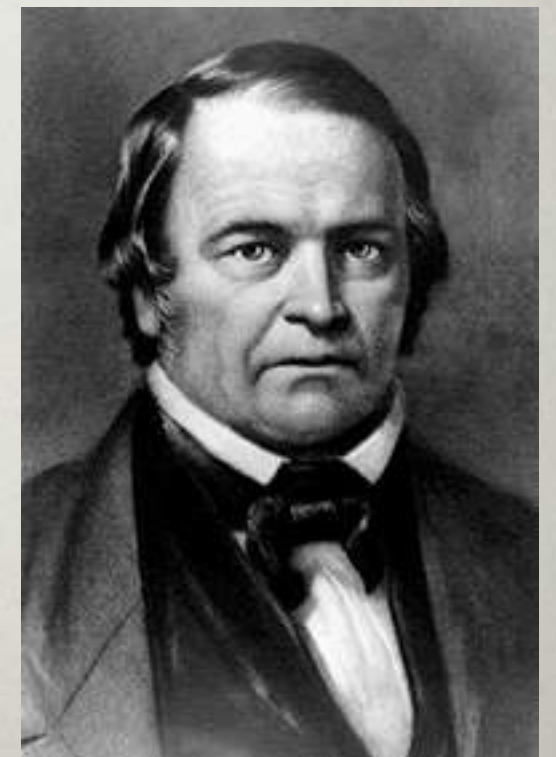

HISTORY

- Western New York was still a frontier and so professional clergy were scarce.
- Many of these self-taught revivalists were susceptible to various heresies.
- The religious fervor made it easy for heretics to gain a following even though they were not teaching orthodox views.

MILLERITES

- William Miller was a farmer from Low Hampton, New York.
- He preached that the Second Coming would occur 1843-1844.
- He survived a battle in Vermont during the War of 1812.

Dr. Zukeran looks at a Mormon view of Jesus comparing it to an authentic Christian perspective. He finds that the Mormon view is not supported by the biblical text.

Jesus a Procreated Being?

The Mormon Church claims to have restored the true teachings of Jesus. In this article, we will compare the Mormon doctrine of Jesus to the New Testament.

The New Testament teaches that Jesus, God the Son, is eternal and has no beginning. However, Mormonism teaches that Jesus is a procreated being, the literal offspring of God the Father and one of His heavenly wives. According to Mormon theology, God the Father, Elohim, dwells on a planet with His many spirit wives producing numerous spirit children who await to inhabit physical bodies so that they too may one day ascend to godhood as their parents did. Jesus is believed to be the firstborn spirit child
